Chapter 1 by Nathan Zilora

(This story must be written in a second person view)

You are walking to work, when you realize that you forgot to get the mail. When you read it, your glad you did.

From: Mr.Manager

To: Dave Falaski

Dear Mr.Falaski,

I am sorry to say that we are laying people back. Recent employments have turned out to be unnecessary. After much debate with my other supervisors, we have decided to lay you off. You are constantly watching Netflix at work hours, are eating popcorn near the water filter, and lighting fires near the gas tank. So after much, hard, heated debates, we are laying you of from Chucke cheese.

You can not believe your eyes, those aren't things you've ever done! This mean that your manager made a mistake! He didn't want to kick you out, he meant to kick out...

Triangles. That's guilty. It was all filmed on Mr Manager's Chucke Cheese CCTV in the blending tank room.

He did make a mistake firing you on made-up charges. You should tell Mr Manager that Joseph Grubbstick's blending slip-up cost Chucke Cheese over $1000. You've now got to persuade Mr Manager that Grubbstick's 'crime' far out-strips anything you've been accused of.

Your Chucke Cheese job's on the line and you've got to act fast before your final Chucke Cheese pay-check has been authorised. After that - there's no going back for you.

So, you ...
